

“And just look at the mess!” said Mrs Bear, wiping her hands on her son’s head.

I looked.

A gloopy, grey puddle oozed across the tablecloth.

I dipped my finger in and licked.

Porridge! Porridge was something I’d never understood.

