

Suddenly an ear-bursting roar came from outside the store.

The ground shook again and again. The roar sounded, but louder this time.

“Ok this is more than a little weird now!” Dee said with fear in her voice.

She could see people outside running down the street. The people were screaming and looking behind them.

Dee slowly made her way to the door.

She opened it to poke her head out when from nowhere a car rolled past the front and down the street, followed by another terrifying roar.

Dee caught her breath and opened the door fully and looked up the street.

