

CHAPTER 2

Phone, Camera, Action!

“So, fill these in at home.” Mr Jones handed out some worksheets. “Any questions?”

“Mr Jones,” Reece began. “The robots... can they think or feel things?”

Mr Jones laughed. “A common mistake!” he said. “They look so human you may think that. But no, they are just microchips in a heap of metal.”

Something rattled behind him.

“But this new super computer is moving towards virtual intelligence,” he told them. “So I suppose you could say that has a brain.”

“It’s just that the robots looked angry before. And they seemed to be mucking about.” Asad said.

