

CHAPTER 4

Fear Factor

By this time they were all running. Jodie didn't know why she was running. She couldn't help herself. She hurried after Cara and Jamie-Lee. She didn't want to get left behind.

They were out of breath by the time they got to the fair. They stopped and looked round.

It was strange, very strange. Whatever was happening to them?

The music was still playing loudly and there were lights all around. But somehow the lights weren't right.

They seemed dim, not the bright cheerful lights they had expected. And the music was the only sound. There were no voices. There were no people.

“I don't like this,” said Cara.

“I want to go back,” said Jamie-Lee.
“Which way do we go?”

They both looked at Jodie.
