

After being mashed and squeezed in the stomach, food goes into your small intestine, where all the goodness is taken out.

Then the leftover waste gets pushed along the colon and comes out as poo.

A tapeworm can live in your gut for 20 years. It can grow up to 10 metres long and you might not even know it's there!